Where Am I? by DANIEL C. DENNETT. Now that I've won my suit under the Freedom of Information Act, I am at liberty to reveal for the first time a curious episode in my life that may be of interest not only to those engaged in research in the philosophy of mind, artificial intelligence, and neuroscience but also to the general public.

Hi. I have completed 2 Vipassana retreats. What I wanted to add, is that the technique of Vipassana "i.e. the observation of sensations arising and passing through the body, allows the meditator to observe the relationship between mind and matter at the experiential level, this is key and what makes this approach so successful.

That kind of skeptical, questioning, "don't accept what authority tells you" attitude of science "is also nearly identical to the attitude of mind necessary for a functioning democracy. Science and democracy have very consonant values and approaches, and I don't think you can have one without the other.

Phenomenology is the study of structures of consciousness as experienced from the first-person point of view. The central structure of an experience is its intentionality, its being directed toward something, as it is an experience of or about some object.

Phenomenology (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

A dream is a succession of images, ideas, emotions, and sensations that usually occur involuntarily in the mind during certain stages of sleep. The content and purpose of dreams are not fully understood, although they have been a topic of scientific, philosophical and religious interest throughout recorded history. Dream

I've been thinking about my patients of all ages who are having trouble becoming fully adult. What is surprising is how strongly their inner mind resists saying goodbye to parenting that never worked in the first place and embracing the genuine love and support that have been waiting for them in adult life.

Which theories & explanations make the most sense? So far, the two leading theories are that we're sliding between parallel (or similar) realities, or that we've visited holodecks (and may be in one, right now) that have some glitches. However, those concepts are broad. I've been trying to narrow the possibilities.
