Fluorescence in situ hybridization (FISH) is a molecular cytogenetic technique that uses fluorescent probes that bind to only those parts of the chromosome with a high degree of sequence complementarity. It was developed by biomedical researchers in the early 1980s and is used to detect and localize the presence or absence of specific DNA sequences on chromosomes.

In the field of molecular modeling, docking is a method which predicts the preferred orientation of one molecule to a second when bound to each other to form a stable complex. Knowledge of the preferred orientation in turn may be used to predict the strength of association or binding affinity between two molecules using, for example, scoring functions.

Molecular Vision policy on use of cell lines: Compulsory authentication. Manuscripts reporting experiments in which immortalized cell lines are used must include data and documentation that demonstrate that the actual cells used in the experiments reported in the manuscript exhibit the correct phenotype and genotype.

This book worked great with my class. Very similar to the previous edition so if you need to save money, you could get the older one. It's always recommended that if you've been assigned problems to check out the edition on reserve in your college library just to make sure the numbering hasn't changed.

The identification of antigen-specific T cell receptors (TCRs) is a complicated process, which is technically challenging and not suitable for clinical applications. To simplify this process, Lu and colleagues developed an efficient single-cell approach, which can significantly reduce the labor and time for the TCR isolation.

Parkinson's disease (PD) is a common disorder, and the diagnosis of Parkinson's disease is clinical and relies on the presence of characteristic motor symptoms. The accuracy of the clinical diagnosis of PD is still limited. Functional neuroimaging using SPECT technique is helpful in patients with first signs of parkinsonism. The changes detected may reflect the disease process itself and/or ...
