Given the centrality of love in Biblical teaching, it is not surprising that C.S. Lewis commented on love a great deal. He recognized different kinds of love in his book The Four Loves (affection, friendship, romance, and charity-agape). There is no way we could do justice to all the wide-ranging comments he made on the subject—so we will focus on a few observations on “agape” love.

"A pleasure is full grown only when it is remembered. You are speaking, Hm—n, as if the pleasure were one thing and the memory another. It is all one thing. The s—roni could say it better than I say it now. Not better than I could say it in a poem. What you call remembering is the last part of the pleasure, as the crah is the last part of a poem. When you and I met, the meeting was over very ...

If there were such a society in existence and you or I visited it, I think we should come away with a curious impression. We should feel that its economic life was very socialistic and, in that sense, "advanced," but that its family life and its code of manners were rather old-fashioned—perhaps even ceremonious and aristocratic.
